

Anticipation

A strange sense of happiness
Invades the deepest reaches of my being.
Increasing daylight quickens the pulse.
Sounds not heard for a season,
are suddenly all around me,
As the earth moves to a vernal position.
Can it be that the ravages of time
Have not deadened the sense of hope for another season of joy?